Goals The purpose of teaching Comparative management is to provide students with comprehensive knowledge of various management styles practiced by managers in different countries and different business contexts, with the aim of preparing them to manage international organisations successfully. The intention is to help them to develop an awareness of the concept of culture and its pervasive and hidden influence on behaviour, particularly with respect to management and management practices. We want them to develop familiarity with the types of situations and issues that managers confront when working internationally or in otherwise diverging contexts and to appreciate the impact of living and working in another culture on one's personal behaviour.

Description Comparative management analyses the extent to which management principles are applicable from one country or business context to another. Since the leader in the development of management principles is the United States, comparative management also seeks to determine the applicability of American know-how to foreign locales. For example, the rise of many countries in Asia from developing country to global powerhouse status, the unprecedented transformation of socialist societies through the adoption of market culture, and the economic integration in Europe have made it an imperative to explore alternative management approaches to standard United States theories.
