Description	For this purpose, the skills training consists of two key elements: 1. Developing a research proposal. This can be done through literature and self-study or consultation with a potential thesis supervisor; 2. Lectures that provide you with more information about: * Writing a master thesis in general, e.g., how can you find a topic, what is a typical structure of academic/industrial report, collecting data; * Quality standards in academic/industrial report writing; * Approaches in academic research, e.g., empirical studies and validation, modelling, simulations, proof techniques, policy/protocol development, algorithm design, complexity analysis, surveys; * Ethics aspects and scientific integrity.
