Goals
 * Make sense of advanced organizational science literature and critically assess quantitative and qualitative empirical findings reported in top-tier journals
 * Provide solutions to change-related issues in organizations by applying theoretical and empirical insights
 * Co-facilitate tutorial sessions centred around one theme, substantiated with scientific literature, meant to be interactive and creative (e.g. case studies, role plays, debates or discussion)
 * Take initiative and demonstrate leadership responsibilities as members of a facilitation team or as session leader vis-à-vis their peers
 * Engage peers in collaborative learning and co-exploration of topics as an active and critical participant

Description
 This course aims at furthering students' understanding of the development of organisations over time and how this development may or may not be influenced or even be 'managed'. The course consists of two parts. First, we look at change 'from the outside in'. A broad overview is provided of the theoretical and empirical literature on the nature of organisational change and the processes involved. In the second part of the course, we study organisational interventions by management consultants. We study the consultancy industry, learn to differentiate among types of management consultants, and assess the challenges that consultants and clients face.
