Description	The course Governance and Institutions in Emerging Markets introduces essential perspectives on governance and institutions – two fundamental concepts defining the features of states in emerging markets. First, governance and institutions influence the policies aimed at improving the quality of human life in contemporary societies across the globe. Second, governance, institutions, and socioeconomic development are interdependent. Multiple political factors shape economic policies in contemporary governance systems, and the political choices of policies affect different socio-economic areas. Therefore, it is crucial to understand how different policy areas are governed, what political factors shape economic development, and the evolution of specific sectors and public policies. This course introduces fundamental concepts and theories of governance and institutions shaping emerging markets countries. By applying the Political Economy Analysis method, we will focus on assessing the quality of governance and institutions and how to understand their role in contemporary societies. The course will develop students' knowledge and skills related to analyzing emerging markets' institutional context and conditions. More specifically, after completing this course, students should be able to accomplish the following four learning objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Objective 1: Define, classify, and summarise key concepts and approaches drawn from the literature on governance and institutions applicable to the study of emerging markets countries.</li> <li>* Objective 2: Apply an analytical framework to analyse governance and institutional structure in real-life case studies of an emerging market country.</li> <li>* Objective 3: Constructively judge the applicability and suitability of studied concepts to the analysis of a real-life case study of an emerging market country.</li> <li>* Objective 4: Design a plan of action to explore opportunities and overcome obstacles created by a given real-life case's governance and institutional features.</li> </ul>
