Goals	The mainstream business community is in urgent need of ways to transform sustainability challenges into competitive advantages. Achieving that goal requires business professionals with an early understanding of how sustainability issues run as a common thread through strategy, management and control, finance, and marketing. This course discusses sustainability in a business context through this multidisciplinary perspective. By doing so, students will be able to understand how businesses can address sustainability to be more competitive and create economic benefits for both the firm and society. Also, to achieve that goal, students will learn how sustainability affects businesses in their strategy formation, their performance management, measurement and control, their reporting, and their financing decisions.
